

Indispensable

In Diphtheria

Is Bovinine, as has been attested by thousands of physicians. One of the many testimonials we have received is one from Dr. Arthur P. Ginn of Omaha, which reads, "I used Bovinine in several cases of diphtheria, and was successful with the cases. This to me is sufficient evidence of its value, no other food being used during treatment, except the milk used as vehicle for its administration."

Bovinine

being a food product, made by a special cold process from lean beef, is easy to take, quickly assimilated, speedy in its life-promoting properties, is invaluable as a life-giver when it is necessary to maintain strength to carry a patient over the crisis of a disease. In diphtheria and other throat troubles where it has become impossible to take nourishment by the mouth, Bovinine has sustained life for weeks, administered as an injection.

THE PEOPLE DO NOT WANT IT.

"The present constitution has, to a great extent, outlived its usefulness. It contains many provisions inimical to the best interests of the people. Time and again it has proved an obstruction to reforms demanded by the citizens. There is a general demand for such a convention, and we believe the people will so vote at the election."—Youngstown Telegram.

There is not now, and there has not been a demand by the people for a new constitution. The railroads and corporations throughout the state want it, for they know that they will own it, body and soul, as they do the present legislature. Their purpose is to evade taxation. When the present legislature is on the verge of making the Rogers fifty year franchise bill a law, which takes from the city the power of regulating fare and turns the people over to the tender mercies of soulless corporations, what can the people expect from a constitutional convention. When the present constitution was adopted corporations in this state were in their infancy, and their power was not very great, but let a constitutional convention be called now and see how the corporations will assert their mastery.

When the question was voted on in 1891, only one vote in eight was cast for it. People do not want it any more now than they did then. It will load an additional expenditure upon us of half a million dollars, and a new constitution to be made by a convention that would surely be operated and manipulated by corporations and corporate interests, would be a curse to us forever. The people know what they have now, but they do not know what they will get if the proposition passes.

A MODEL LEGISLATOR.

There is one man in the Ohio legislature today who stands head and shoulders above any other man, and is as far above the plagues who control the body as heaven is above the earth. He is as honest as Roscoe Conkling, as heroic as James G. Blaine, and as patriotic as Allen G. Thurman. Many may equal him in breadth of intellectual powers, but in the individual qualities of courage that never falters, of integrity that is never undimmed in its lustre and of action that is unflinching in the execution of his honest convictions, he stands single and alone among the Ohio statesmen of today. He has been faithful to every trust, has been brave when others feared and he has stood like a wall of adamant against the angry surges of corruption. He does not straggle in the rear of the procession of public opinion, but he seeks to lead it. He has been the relentless foe of corporate greed all through the session. He has proposed several wise and judicious measures, but they were shored aside because they came from a Democrat. But he is one of the very few men who can stand on the floor of the house and in all the dignity of his unshaken manhood point with pride to his public pledges and public honesty as the guides to his public action. He commands the confidence of his fellow citizens and he grandly typifies the noblest government on earth, where the popular will is the supreme law. This man's name is General Aquila Wylie, of Wayne county.

"I WILL NEVER CONSENT—CONSENTED."

Senator Williams, of Alliance, in defining his position upon the infamous Rogers bill the other day said: "My signature, so far as it defines my attitude on the bill, is absolutely meaningless—nothing but an accommodation. I do not and have not indorsed the bill, and that is understood. I shall decline to be bound in any degree to vote for the bill. In fact, I look with much alarm at the constantly increasing tendency to indulge in legislation which permits the expenditure of public money without a vote of the people directly interested. I voted in favor of submitting the water work scheme to a vote of the people and I look upon the bestowal of public franchises in much the same light; as legislation which, perhaps, should be passed upon by the people before coming operative."

"And yet Senator Williams, the Republican Senator from the Stark-Carroll district, after making these pointed remarks about the infamous measure, allowed his manhood to shrivel up, and bowed with deference to the will of Foraker, who prostituted his political influence to rob the people of their rights. The bill was notoriously the spawn of monopoly greed, that was hatched into the semblance of life by the party lash. There were many members who believed it an unwise and unjust measure, but party despotism hurled the doom of the traitor upon all who dared to think, speak and act for their constituents, and a servile legislature has simply recorded the mandate of intolerant and suicidal leadership.

How can Senator Williams ever face the people of his district again, after being a party to a gigantic conspiracy which strikes a death blow at their rights.

TO SENATOR WILLIAMS.

"My signature, so far as it defines, is nothing but an accommodation." To vote for the Rogers bill, he declines. Until with Foraker he has a conversation. But who can leave Joseph and then be wise? Not that I will not resist temptation; A little he strove and much repented; And whither, "I will not consent"—consented.

GEN. E. B. FINLEY, of Bucyrus, in replying to Carlisle's speech, says that "the Democratic party stands not for free silver alone, but for true bimetalism. It stands for the use of both gold and silver as legal tender money, to be coined by the government on equal terms, and it is hardly fair to speak of the friends of bi-metalism as free silver Democrats. If the party at Chicago adopts the bi-metallic platform, and nominates a good Democrat on the platform, the chances are more than equal that he will be elected."

JAMES R. GARFIELD is an exception to the rule that a great man does not have great children. He recently introduced a bill to prevent corruption in politics. He immortalized himself by opposing the vicious ripper bill for Dayton. He wears rather a loose robe of partisan allegiance, and this of itself makes him a good senator. There is talk of sending him to Congress from the district that was represented by his father for nine consecutive terms, and he certainly merits the honor.

THE CROWNING OUTRAGE.

The Rogers' bill, authorizing municipal authorities under certain conditions, to grant street railway franchises for fifty years, passed the Senate on Tuesday. It is an event that may well strike the people of Ohio with alarm.

This legislature has been in session for sixteen weeks, and about the only good thing that has been accomplished, was the passage of Senator Garfield's bill to purify elections. Outside of this there has been no legislation whatever of any general importance effected during the entire session. The time has been flittered away in trying to foist upon Democratic cities obnoxious ripper bills under the pretense of municipal reform.

It passed a joint resolution calling for a constitutional convention which will entail an expense upon the people of the state of at least half a million of dollars, and it is so ingeniously and so diabolically contrived that the people are to be lured into voting for it without knowing it.

The Rogers' bill was passed in the face of the protests of nearly all of the newspapers of the state, and an overwhelming public sentiment against it. The few amendments made do not destroy the viciousness of the measure, and it is safe to say the street railway companies fared far better than they expected. It was a triumph of these great corporations over the public, and the members of the legislature who gave the bill their votes, did so against the wishes of their constituents, and without regard to the public good.

The new law provides for consolidation when the interests of the people demand competition.

It provides for fifty year franchises, thus enabling contracts on the future generation.

It makes it impossible for a municipal corporation to change the rate of fare for twenty years.

It fastens upon the cities of the state a five cent fare for a long term of years without an opportunity to change.

It gives the street railway companies every possible advantage of their patrons.

From start to finish the bill was pushed by a large lobby of street railway magnates, assisted by paid attorneys and lobbyists. They promised everything, but were careful that these promises were not incorporated in the bill. The corporations have got their bill and the people have got their promises for better service and cheaper fares but these are worth no more than a lot of confederate money. Senator Avery well-expressed it when he said the bill was a jug-handled measure in which the advantage was all on the side of the corporations, who need not proceed to act under it, until they secure a council favorable to their plans.

The passage of this infamous measure fifty crowns the record of a session that has been marked throughout by grasping extravagance and by a contemptuous disregard of the restrictions of public morality. It has long since become evident that the legislature knew nothing and cared for nothing that legislators ought to know and care for, and the few men who might and should have stood up for the public honor and safety have held their peace or weakly gone with the crowd, leaving the actual leadership to the plunderers. Thirteen members in the senate and seven in the house are all that could be mustered on the side of the people as against the corporations.

For this outrage the party which controls both houses of the legislature must be held responsible. The fact that the bill takes away the rights of the people and gives them to grinding corporations only intensifies the disgust and indignation, which the people will inevitably visit upon the men who have participated in this crime.

Let it not be forgotten that our own Senator Williams and Representatives Wilhelm and Austin voted for the monstrous iniquity.

The Akron Beacon and Republican, in replying to the News-Democrat about Canton's population, says that "the two things which contributed to it, were the increase in territory, and the arrival of the Duerber Works, but this cannot occur again." We are not so sure of that. We now have as much outlying territory as we had ten years ago when the corporation limits were extended, and an effort will be made to get them in between now and 1900. As to securing another Duerber Works, we beg leave to inform our friend that we have a wide awake board of trade that works with a tireless energy, and loses no time whatever in looking after Canton's interests. They are not yet another watch works, but factories and workshops of other kinds will do equally as well to increase the population.

HOW WOULD EX-GOVERNOR RUSSELL DO?

There is no doubt that the Massachusetts Democratic convention next Tuesday will endorse ex-Governor William F. Russell as a candidate before the Chicago convention for the Presidency. Mr. Russell has stood the test of official service in an executive capacity, in a way that has proven remarkable ability and fitness for the high office for which his friends have suggested him as a candidate. He was a progressive Mayor before he was chosen chief executive of his State, and his three years' service in the latter capacity has never been excelled by any of the prominent and able men who have been Governors of the old Bay State.

Mr. Russell is a man of national reputation because his demonstrated merit has attracted the attention and commanded the respect of the people. His sound judgment has easily kept him from making mistakes; he has always been a progressive man, but with a conservatism that enabled him to first ascertain the right and then contest for it with a zeal that was refreshing, and certain of success. His popularity has been repeatedly shown among the people by the support they have given him as a candidate, and the ratification of his position three successive times although his party was in a minority in the State at each contest. He is a magnetic man because his ability, sound judgment and fearless courage command an admiration from the people that overrides prejudice.

With Massachusetts in his support, he may well be the candidate of all New England; there is no man in the nation in any party better qualified and adapted to the duties of the high office. He has treated of national questions and issues in public addresses, and his position and belief upon them all is as clearly known as those of any man in the nation. His speeches for tariff reform have been models of sound reasoning and deep research. In all his public career he has steadfastly insisted upon economy of expenditure and as executive of the State, he made free use of the veto power to check loose and hasty legislation, which example was popularly followed by his Republican successor.

William E. Russell is a young man, able, fearless, conscientious and progressive, devoted to the sound principles of economic government, because of their soundness and not because of their temporary popularity, an orator and scholar, never haughty, nor disposed to hold himself above any honorable citizen however humble, with a clean official record. New England can honor itself by standing with a united front on the support of such a candidate at Chicago.

QUAY A FULL-FLEDGED CANDIDATE.

The McKinley organs who a month ago were saying that Quay was only in the Presidential race to throw his influence to McKinley at the proper time must now abandon that idea. The Pennsylvania Republicans are for Quay first, last, and all the time. A resolution naming McKinley for second choice was overwhelmingly defeated, and another resolution to take up McKinley in the event of the retirement of Quay received only two or three votes.

Senator Quay is the idol of the Republicans of Pennsylvania. He is the Republican organization of Pennsylvania. He is its heart, its brain and its inspiration; and what would the party be without him. The temporary chairman paid him a fitting eulogy when he characterized him to be "true as a man, faithful as a friend, astute as a leader, able as a statesman, loyal as a citizen, courageous and aggressive in contest, unassuming and retiring in private life."

Senator Quay is a leader of leaders. In the highest legislative body in the world, he has demonstrated parliamentary ability and tact, unexampled in our political gladiators. When the dark cloud of the Force Bill hung over the Capitol at Washington—when it had passed the House and already crossed the threshold of the Senate, it was Quay who rose upon the floor of the Senate, and proclaimed the death of the Force election bill. Quay saw that every intelligent and property-owning Republican in the South, black and white, and the great mass of business men in the North, of all parties, were protesting against the revolutionary force policy of Wrecker Reed. He saw that someone must call a halt; that many deplored the peril, but feared to cross the dead line marked by the revolutionists, but he boldly crossed the dead line himself, and challenged the guard of destructionists to fire upon him. There have been many disputants who could surpass him in electrifying the country with polished rhetoric, but as a leader in the U. S. Senate, he showed himself equal to the emergency in the defeat of the mad policy of force and theft in national elections, and his achievement at that time will long live in the grateful memories of every political faith.

The adherents of McKinley might as well make up their minds now as later on, that if McKinley is to be nominated he must be nominated without the vote of Pennsylvania, and also without Quay's influence. Quay will never support McKinley for President in the coming convention for several reasons. He knows that McKinley is the candidate of what is left of the "Hog Combine" in Pennsylvania, and he does not propose to have Chris Magee defeat him in the national convention, and then laugh at his discomfiture. If Quay shall not be nominated at St. Louis, he will name the man, and that man will hardly be McKinley.

ROBBERS IN DANGER.

Late reports from Matabeleland, an extensive territory lying north of the Transvaal in South Africa, are to the effect that the white inhabitants of Bulawayo, the chief city of the country and formerly King Lobengula's capital, are in imminent danger of massacre. The British South Africa company, with the countenance and aid of the government, fought for and seized Lobengula's domain, because it contained gold fields, and now that the natives have risen to fight, it must again fight to retain the spoils. The whites now in Matabeleland are trespassers and land robbers, and while it is hoped that they will escape massacre, lovers of justice will rejoice if the victims of their invasion shall drive and keep them out. Lobengula's territory was not bought by the British, but taken with a strong hand. It was acquired just as Captain Kidd seized property on the salty deep and as the freebooters gathered wealth on the Rhine. The invaders are consequently thieves, as much so as the cattle robbers of the New Mexican or Arizona plains, and if the natives shall severely punish them it will be simply a case of retributive justice.

THE "REVIEW" WANTS TO REVISE ITS FIGURES.

"One of the surprises of latter-day politics was the result of the state election in Louisiana on Tuesday. In 1888 this state gave 57,000 Democratic plurality and 62,000 for Cleveland in 1892. The returns of Tuesday's election are incomplete, but if the Democrats get the state all they will be lucky. The Republican gains almost everywhere were phenomenal. The city of New Orleans, which has 37,000 registered white majority, has gone for Pharr, the Republican candidate for Governor, by 390 to 1,000 majority, against 22,272 Democratic majority at the last election. We are moved to exclaim: 'Can such things be and overcome us like a summer cloud without our special wonder?'"—Alliance Review.

Hold on! hold on! hold on! Your figures are something like Charley Grosvenor's, who claims that McKinley has already 1,163 delegates out of 955 delegates, of the convention. Don't attempt to ram a lot of fabricated figures down the people's throats to bolster up the Republican cause, for you will be called to a strict accountability for it.

We are here for that purpose. You say that in 1888 Cleveland received 57,000 plurality in Louisiana, and yet he only got 85,032 votes. If he would have gotten the votes of all the white people, negroes and Indians, he would still be about 2,000 short of the plurality you give him. But where does the 30,484 votes come in that Harrison received in 1888? In New Orleans, you say the Democrats had a plurality of 22,272, and yet the official vote shows that McEnery the Democratic candidate for Governor at the last election only received, in the whole of Orleans parish in which the city of New Orleans is situated, 20,834 votes. But where do the 4,038 votes come in that the Republican candidate for Governor received at that election?

We do not know where the Review got their figures, but they must certainly have obtained them from Charley Grosvenor. If the editor of the Review will take the time to examine the Chicago Daily News almanac, which is conceded to be one of the best sources of political information in the country, he will find that Cleveland's plurality over Harrison in 1888 was 54,548; in 1892 it was 59,622, and in 1894 the Democratic plurality over the Republicans was 45,292. The latest dispatches from the election on Tuesday indicate that Louisiana has gone Democratic by 3,500 plurality, and when it is known that there was a desperate effort made by the sugar planters to down the Democratic ticket, the victory achieved by the Democrats is all the more significant.

NO DEMOCRAT WILL BOLT.

A dispatch has been published to the effect that Wm. J. Bryan, the Nebraska silver leader, says he will bolt if the Chicago convention does not pass a free coinage platform. If that is Mr. Bryan's position, he has no business in the Chicago convention. He must remember that the money question is not the only question before us. Democrats, or men calling themselves Democrats, who have but one idea, should hunt up the prohibition party, and stop there. The Democratic party in its history and traditions has never stood for only one idea and never will. When the time comes that any one man or any one idea completely dominates the Democratic party, then there is no hope for the people from the rapine and plunder of Republicanism.
